ODGEN ALUMNI HAVE BANQUET DECEMBER 28

128 Former Students of Ogden College Are in Attendance

With 128 in attendance at a banquet at the Helm Hotel on Monday evening, December 28, the Ogden College Alumni Association held the ninth annual meeting of the organization since Ogden ceased to function as an individual institution.

The attendance was the largest of the series of meetings, and plans were discussed during the program to swell the number to an even greater total at the 1937 rally.

The burden of conducting next year's work of the alumni organization will fall on William H. Natcher, local attorney, who was selected as president to succeed Hiram W. Sublett. Other officers elected during the meeting were: Charles Alexander of Nashville, vice-president; Dr. Ward Sumpter, secretary, and Weldon Peete, treasurer.

Mr. Natcher served as toastmaster, and the principal address of the occasion was made by Albert C. Dulaney, member of the Class of 1902 at Ogden and who is a successful banker in San Antonio, Texas. Mr. Dulaney, after paying tribute to Ogden and several of the illustrious alumni of the school, spoke on the subject "Education and Government," making an address which he described as "A plea for sound leadership" in governmental affairs.

During the meeting it was voted to compile a list of Ogden graduates and former students with their present addresses and to have the information prepared in pamphlet form for distribution at the meeting next year. This work was entrusted to a committee composed of W. C. Sumpter, Cooper Smith, John Rodas and John Jones.

Arnold Winkenhof, former Ogden student who is now connected with Western, stated it is desired to devote a portion of the space in the "W" Club trophy room, which will be provided in the new building now under construction on Western's campus, to Ogden trophies. A committee composed of Chester Gilliam, Herman Lowe, William Roemer, and Roy Porter was appointed to assist Mr. Winkenhof in preparing this collection.

The meeting was opened by Joe Lillard, aged ex-janitor of the college, who tolled the old college bell which had been removed to the dining room for the occasion. The former janitor was called on for a brief talk during which he told of some of his experiences while at Ogden. He was given a present of a cash collection made up by those present.

All of these in attendance were required to introduce themselves and several were called on for short talks.

The group went on record as expressing appreciation for the work done by Mr. Sublett in making the program the success it was.

School Dance Will Be Held in Gym Friday

A general school dance will be held in the gymnasium Friday, January 15, with admission by social ticket and ten cents. It will be a program dance, and programs may be secured at Miss Schneider's office. Students desiring to bring guests may do so by submitting their names to Miss Schneider's office not later than Friday. Music will be furnished by the Red and Gray orchestra.

The social committee is very appreciative of the cooperation of the student body in keeping the dances of this semester on a high plane, and in showing their school spirit at every occasion.

Spriegel Speaks

Dr. W. R. Spriegel spoke before the Business and Professional Women's Club on Monday evening, December 21. His subject was "Fair Working Conditions."

DEBATE CHIEF

DR. L. B. SALOMON
SALOMON HEADS
DEBATING TEAM

First Debates Are With Union University Soon

The college debating team, under the direction of Dr. Louis B. Salomon, will hold its contest for the semester either January 18 or 21. The opposing teams are to be from Union University of Jackson, Tennessee. The subject for the debates is "Resolved: That Congress shall be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum working hours for industry." There are to be two teams, one taking the affirmative side in the afternoon, the other taking the negative in the evening.

The personnel is as follows: Elbert Torgatt, Depoy; Ray Logan, Burkeville; August Winkenhof, Jr., Bowling Green; James C. Canterville, Bedford; Warren H. Miller, Madisonville; John A. Smith, Grassy; Charles Runyan, Marion; and Gordon Edwards, Horse Cave.

DENMAN MAKES COPIES OF PLAY

There have been so many requests for copies of the little play "John Marshall and the Unwritten Constitution," written by John Leach of Hartford, as a class project in Dr. Clarence P. Denman's course in Methods of Teaching History, that Dr. Denman has had the play mimeographed.

The play was dramatized last year by Miss Pelly McClure's history class of the College Heights High School. The play was designed to make the work of John Marshall and his interpretation of the constitution more real to the high school seniors. Copies sent to the public schools, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and Dallas, Texas, were well received and requests to dramatize it in those schools have come back.

Any high school teachers of history can secure a copy of this play by sending ten cents in stamps to Dr. Clarence P. Denman, Western Kentucky State Teachers College. This small fee is charged to cover costs of mailing.

Article Written by Murray Co-ed Received

(Editor's Note—The following article, written by "Bibbo" Williams (Blesser), Murray co-ed, was sent to the editor. It might prove of interest to Western students.)

The fact that Murray State College students "stand out" everywhere they go, whether in town, play, or even travel, was illustrated recently by a group of Murrayans who were on their way home to spend the Christmas holidays, and had occasion to represent Murray in lively and very impromptu musical program, presented in the rear coach of a northbound L. & N. passenger train after it left Bowling Green on December 18, the last day of school before the holidays.

It all started when a group of

SPEECH BANQUET TO BE HELD ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Seven Members of Speech
Classes Will Speak

"A Speech For Every Day" will be the theme carried out on the program to be given by members of the speech department after the Speech Banquet that will be held at the Helm Hotel Friday, January 15.

The banquet, which will become an annual affair, was conceived by Prof. J. Reid Sterrett, speech instructor, and it provides an excellent opportunity for the development of a first class speech department on the Hill.

The banquet will be attended by some 125 students who have had at least one course in public speaking. Various members of the faculty will also be present. The program consists of seven speeches of five minutes each given by members of one of the speech classes and were chosen by the classes themselves. Those who will appear on program are: A. E. Stone, Warren Miller, C. B. Basham, Walter Pearce, Paul Davis, Mrs. Summers Brinson, and John Lovett.

The first speech, representing Sunday speeches, will be given by John Lovett and will be titled "Sequestration Speeches." The Monday speech will be given by Mrs. Brinson and will be called "Domestic Speech." Tuesday speech will be given by Walter Pearce and will be called "Gesture Speech." Wednesday is the day for the "Romantic Speech" by A. E. Stone. Warren Miller will give the Thursday speech entitled "Flattery Speech." Friday speech will be given by C. B. Basham and called "Political Speech." Saturday speech will be titled "Alibi Speech" and will be given by Paul Davis.

August Winkenhof has been selected to act as toastmaster for the occasion.

Bird Census Taken Here in December

The nineteenth annual Christmas bird census to be taken at Bowling Green, was made on December 22.

The following faculty members participated: Mr. Hayward Brown, Dr. L. Y. Lancaster, Mr. Charles Taylor, Mr. J. R. Whitmer, and Dr. Gordon Wilson. Mr. Basil Cole, former faculty member of Western, who is now working on his Ph.D. at Iowa State University, was a member of the party. The group divided into three parties, one going to the mouth of the Gasper River, another to Jennings Creek, and the third to Elm Grove Dairy Farm, the Chaney farm at Woodburn, and the Covington farm at Lost River. Fifty species of birds were noted, and 5,334 individual birds were seen.

Most of the common species were not so common as usual, due to the dry season. Large numbers were made up chiefly of starlings.

Dr. Wilson added one species to his list, that of the rough-legged hawk, a rare winter resident in this area.

DR. HARDIN CRAIG NOTED EDUCATOR IN CHAPEL TALK

Head of Dept. of English
At Stanford U. Addresses Students

Professor Hardin Craig, head of the Department of English, Stanford University, California, and brother of Prof. W. J. Craig of Western, spoke to the faculty members and students at the Western chapel on January 6.

Dr. Craig, a former Kentuckian, is quite eminent in the field of English and is the author of several scholarly books in that field, including a very popular edition of Shakespeare which is used in many of the colleges of America.

He gave a very interesting chapel talk, questioning whether the intellectual and spiritual growth of the colleges was keeping pace with the architectural growth. He cited instances of building programs that he had seen at Princeton, the University of Minnesota, the University of Iowa, and other places. He believes that architectural growth does not necessarily mean that the intellect or ambition of the students is any greater than before the new edifices were built.

DR. WILSON WILL GIVE RADIO TALK

Address Will be an Elaboration of Recent Chapel Talk

An elaboration of Dr. Gordon Wilson's chapel talk on American Folk Heroes, given November 30, will be given on Western's radio broadcast soon.

Dr. Wilson will discuss more in detail the cowboy, the "bully," the Indian, the "play" desperado, the "hugie," the pioneer scout, the rustic philosopher, the southern colonel, and the "local boy who made good"—characters famous in American literature and near to the hearts of the American people.

The talk will have a musical accompaniment that deals with various phases of folk heroes. "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginia" will be sung while Dr. Wilson is speaking on the Southern Colonel. An Indian war dance will open the musical selections, and "Massa Dear" from the "New World Symphony" by Dvorak will conclude the musical offerings. Soloists who will appear on the program include Dale Grabbill, Jimmy Arnold, and Randall Atcher. The college chorus also will participate.

Stonecipher Goes to Chicago Meeting

During the holidays, Miss Sybil Stonecipher, of the Latin Department, attended a joint session of the Archeological Institute of America, the American Philological Association, and the Linguistic Society of America, which met at the Morrison Hotel from December 28 to 30.

Miss Stonecipher's lecture given by the directors of excavations at Troy, Athens, and other sites, who gave reports of the year's findings. She also went to a special lecture at the Planetarium at which the visitors were shown how the heavens appeared at the time of Homer, nearly 3,000 years ago, on the huge dome. The stars which are seen now would have been seen around the middle of November in Homer's time.

CHORUS BEGINS WORK

The Western Madrigal Chorus has begun work on the annual spring music festival, which will be given early in May. The chorus will present Gounod's "Galla" and several compositions of the music department faculty and Music Majors.

STERRETT WILL PRESENT RADIO PROGRAM SOON

"Two Other People" is
Title of Radio
Play

On Tuesday, January 19, Mr. J. Reid Sterrett will present a radio play, "Two Other People" by Walter Stone. This is the first broadcast of its kind to be presented by Western.

Radio plays demand a different type of technique because of the fact that action must all be presented through the dialogue. The actors chosen for the play, which is twenty-eight minutes long, were chosen for their voices in view of this fact. Robert James Reithel plays "Gene," the boy. Mildred Jones plays "Betty," the girl. Norris Vincent plays "Ben Riley," a detective. Grace Schneck plays "Mrs. Pembroke Worthington," a dowager. Norris Adair plays "Sam Stuart," a business man. Pete Trimpson plays the part of a waiter.

The play presents a girl and a boy, hungry for excitement, meeting by chance in a large city. Through a trick of circumstance, each believes the other to be from a station of life far different from that which each enjoys. What starts as a mild adventure turns into an exciting predicament.

Girls Intramural Basketball Started

Intramural volleyball for girls is over and basketball started Saturday morning. It will continue for several Saturday mornings, and the time is 9:00-12:00. The volleyball tournament, played just before Christmas, was won by the seniors, with the sophomores as runners-up. Mary Elizabeth Englert was the senior captain, and Alberta Fagenbush was captain of the sophomore team. The scores of the three decisive games, played the last night of the tournament, were all in favor of the senior team. The scores were 19-12, 19-13, and 21-10.

Faculty Members Honored by Club

At a recent annual meeting of the Bowling Green Kiwanis Club Dr. L. Y. Lancaster was introduced as Vice President of the Club for the year 1937. Registrar E. H. Canon was made secretary which office he has held for the past six years in the club. Dr. M. L. Billings and W. R. Spriegel are members of the Board of Directors of the Club for the ensuing year.

MISSIE BANK NIGHT AWARD

Rose C. James, Western student from McHenry, Ky., who resides in Potter Hall, could well have afforded to remain in Bowling Green over the holidays. No doubt, she would have been at the Capitol Theatre Saturday night when her name was called at the $375 bank night program.

SPRIEGEL GOES TO CHICAGO CON.

American Economic Convention Held on December 29-30

Dr. W. R. Spriegel attended the annual meeting of the American Economic Association which was held December 28, 29, 30 at Chicago.

The convention was held jointly by the American Sociological Society, American Statistical Association, American Farm Economic Association, National Association of Marketing Teachers, Teachers of Law in Collegiate Schools of Business, American Accounting Association, and American Political Science Association. The meeting was attended by the leaders in these respective fields.

One of the outstanding features of this year's meeting was the attempt to harmonize the various fields of specialization. The president of the Statistical Association stated in an address that in the future, schools of social science would be on a par in every respect with schools of medicine, law, etc.

Open Letter to Former Students of Western

On Saturday evening, January 30, at 6:30 o'clock, the second annual banquet and rally given by the Louisville and Jefferson County Alumni and friends of Western Teachers College will take place. The banquet and rally, followed by a dance, will be held in the Georgian Room of the Kentucky Hotel at Fifth and Walnut Streets. The charge for the evening's entertainment, including both the banquet and the dancing, is $1.00—the only expense which will be incurred during the evening.

We are hoping that this Reunion-Rally will be one of the most enthusiastic get-togethers ever held for students, former students, alumni, and friends of College Heights. The meeting,

Kelly Thompson is in Charge of Annual Banquet

The second annual banquet and rally given by the Louisville and Jefferson County Alumni and friends of Western Teachers College to be held January 30 in Louisville, will be one of the events to occur before K. E. A. this spring. Kelly Thompson, head of Western's Publicity Department, asserted recently. The reunion rally will be held in the Georgian Room of the Kentucky Hotel, followed by a dance. Last year, when it was voted that the rally become an annual affair, 250 former Western students were there. Glenn Kendall was elected president of the Louisville unit, but Mr. Kendall resigned when he accepted a position at Norris, Tennessee. The "steering" committee met with President Cherry and Kelly Thompson on December 16 at a dinner at the Seelbach Hotel, at which time they elected Superintendent Stivers temporary president.

SPEECH BANQUET

The speech banquet that will be given Friday night, will be a significant event. It will signify the intentions of an institution to improve its speech department. The plan was suggested by Prof. J. Reid Sterrett, who deserves much credit for his efforts to stimulate interest in Western's speech classes.

Any plan whereby a group is organized, or wherein improvements are the ultimate result, is a plan that is admirable. The inauguration of an annual speech banquet will do much to develop the speech department of Western. Public speaking in colleges has been permitted to find its own course in recent years. The stress placed on public speaking has been far inferior to the stress placed on other subjects, possibly because good speakers were thought to be a born speaker. More recently, the various colleges and universities have made an effort to lift public speaking from its insignificant strata to one of the highest levels. To see that Western is keeping step with the other colleges in this respect is indeed gratifying.

Prof. Sterrett, as an instructor, is doing his part to better public speaking among Western students and in the state of Kentucky as a whole. That he is succeeding in his work is evident when one learns that three times in three years a boy coached by him won the annual rhetorical championship. He is stopping with that, however. His work is giving furor on than that. Rather than have one good public speaker in Western, his aim is to have several who can compare with the best speakers in any college. His efforts to achieve that goal are indeed commendable.

The rest now is up to the students. May they get behind Prof. Sterrett in his efforts and make sure the success of the banquet and the speech program as a whole.

ATTITUDE

By Barbara J. Smith

The time my heart was given to the world
I buried her within the chilly earth,
And quivering in the clammy hand of fate
Torn in agony, she rendered birth.

Her child, a thorny weed, pushed the soil,
And staring up—beheld the transient light,
So soothed, forgot his mother in the earth
And felt the warmth of passionate delight.

He slipped in peace the gentle morning dew,
And thrived beneath the warmth of heaven's face,
He called the little world he knew, his own,
And quiet lay within its warm embrace.

Then darkness came, and heaven hid her face,
The perfect world was lost in gloom,
The wretched mother knew her son's despair
And cried to him within her dismal tomb.

Passing Institutions—Sitting Till Bedtime

A good old custom now seldom used was the habit of sitting till bedtime. It took the place of clubs and other social entertainments. It was a species of neighborhood newspaper, for everybody's business and everybody's news. Sometimes it was an affair of young people, who would go in big groups, not for a party but just to spend the time from supper till bedtime in harmless chatter. Popcorn in season, or molasses candy, or juice on the few sharp or full or half moon always be in place. Whether there was an organ or not, there was sure to be some singing of church hymns and sentimental songs. My first knowledge of this custom was gained from hearing the boys play on such occasions. Two of our neighborhood boys, one of them still living, could make the fiddle and the guitar say everything from "Downfall of Paris" to "Pop Goes the Weasel." We used to gather at some farmhouse late in the fall, and make molasses candy. But long before the candy was ready to make into balls and lay out on a greased plate, I had got the stuff all over my grubby paws and had eaten my share, largely by the old-fashioned method of licking fingers.

The most distinctive form of sitting till bedtime included the whole family. The smaller children told tales; played Hall Gail, William Tell, and other fast facts; or put on a first-class imitation of a protracted meeting. The older ones repeated stories of the Civil War that all of us knew by heart but wanted to hear again. Before the evening was over, ghost tales were started, and we children, who were usually worn out with our own devices by this time and were an open-mouthed audience for the yarn-spinners, were afraid to move. I have often drawn my feet up into my chair and sat on them to keep invisible things from biting them off. I once knew a grown man who got so scared at the yarns spun that he was afraid to go home alone, so that some of the big boys had to "go a piece of the way home with him." The discussions about religion and politics that I have heard on some of these after-supper forums would make theologians and political economists green with envy. Usually these topics were left by tacit consent, to the group of men sitting around the stove at the country store or to the group gathered at some home on Sunday afternoon.

Several things have contributed to the passing of the custom of sitting till bedtime. First came the rural telephone, with numerous boxes on the party line. It was easier to stay at home and talk to all the neighborhood than to go to one certain place. The members of a party line were ex-officio parts of a news club; it was hard to let whose conversation it was, anyway, for the whole neighborhood joined in. If your ring did not get central, some kind neighbor would ring for you, assuming that your batteries might be weak. I recall having carried on an after-supper flirtation with a girl on the party line for many weeks; of course, the whole neighborhood listened in, as a matter of custom. She would play sentimental tunes on the organ for me. I would play my French harp; but the odd thing is that I have never seen her to this day, though she lived across the creek bottom.

Now there are radio-grams and the local high school to attract the attention of the neighborhood. Only a few shut-ins now know the value of this old custom of gathering after supper to sit till bedtime.

The Neighborhood Boaster

Every neighborhood has its champion liar, a teller of tall tales. This sort of liar must not be confused with the kind that tells falsehoods to get people into trouble. The professional liar bears no malice toward any one; he likes to tell impossible things just to keep in practice. Some of his yarns, though he would not like to admit it, are as old as the human race and have been merely repackaged by him to suit the local conditions. Occasionally, however, he makes up something that rings true. In my earlier days the neighborhood yarn-spinner was likely to regale us youngsters with great tales of his prowess during the Civil War. One such fellow used to tell how he leaped up a whole passel of Yankees and captured them single-handed. "I gum." Another had a marvelous horse that could outdistance every other animal in our corner of the world. I suspect that he had seen a picture of General Putnam in the school readers of that time, or else had studied the same picture as it appeared on Putnam's dye. One of the earliest literary characters connected with Kentucky fiction was Captain Ralph Stackpole, a brave, loud-mouthed horse-thief in Robert Montgomery Bird's Nick of the Woods, published in 1837. Captain Stackpole knew all the arts of the boaster, being as proficient as the contemporary, half-mythical Mike Fink. Each one, after giving a long ramble about his ability, declared himself to be a Salt River roarer, whatever that might be. Mike Fink's boast included these words: "I can cut-run, out-hop, out-lump, throw down, drag out, and lick any man in this country. I love the women, and I am chock-full of fight."

I recall having heard several other boasts, such as "I can lick my weight in wildcats," "I can get blue sets of jaw teeth, and I'm a man-eater," "I'm wild and baggage, Allen Cash, Louisville, appeared with his French horn, William Carrier, Jr., Louisville, brought out his saxophone, Harwood Tiffin, Covington, Ky., produced his flute, and Henry Yates, Louisville, dug out his clarinet. This small, but very loud, orchestra featured: Bill Manion, also of Louisville, bathtub tenor, with a young ladies' trio (who didn't know they could sing) composed of Miss Alice Solomon, of Louisville, Miss Frances Kendall, of Ft. Marion, Pa., and Miss Martha Ellen McWaters, of Benton, Ky.

The Bowling Green aggregation was completely overwhelmed by this spirited demonstration, and finished by joining the Murrayans in singing songs of both schools. The coach, which was filled with college students only, resounded all the way from Bowling Green to Louisville, which gave a magnificent example of the fine spirit which exists between these two rival institutions.

woolly and full of flax; I've never been carried below the knees," Davy Crockett, of western Tennessee and later of Texas, declared himself "half horse, half alligator, with a little touch of snapping turtle."

"Some of our neighborhood liars," said rats themselves very highly. They quote eminent citizens, now fortunately dead and unable to contest the yarns, when they tell marvelous tales. Horrible crimes, miraculous happenings, ghosts, "haints," and such like are their stock in trade. Some one could make himself a reputation for scholarship by collecting in a single county these marvelous tales, with all the local flavor imparted by the quaintness of the teller. Here is a sample: All of you, wherever you are, remember the story of the man who stopped in a country church during a rain storm and was grabbed by some invisible something which later proved to be a crazy woman who had taken refuge in the same church. That story has been told me in several different counties by the descendants of the man who had this hair-raising experience, only the church changed its name and even its county rather frequently. One man stoutly maintained that his father was the one grabbed and that only by shaking his coat did he escape. Now where did that story start? If it were true, crazy women were once pretty common in country churches.

Fayette Fields, senior at Western, was called to Scottsville recently to the bedside of his wife, who is ill with pneumonia.

therefore, was the queen of the evening, and Jake Evans was selected to be the king. After a grand march, everyone was seated. The other members of the club had to wait until the king and queen drank their punch before they were permitted to do likewise. Even they had to say "Is not this?" or "Is not this?" the king and the queen drinks.

At the conclusion of the program, the club was adjourned.

Enchantress, why cannot I forget you? You are a myriad; you pursue me to the uttermost parts of the earth. Your voice—it, too, haunts me. I cannot sleep because of it. I hear it. At first afar off in the hazy distance. Closer and closer it comes, as if on wings of song. Is it really you? Closer and closer, louder and more insistent comes your clear voice. Ough! Sport-Shots

(Robert L. Pay)

Basketball fans of Bowling Green and vicinity who happen to be on hand for the Western-University of Louisville clash which opens the Hilltoppers 1937 hardwood season at home, probably will view for the last time on the Western floor, a combat between two outstanding netters who are captains, three-year-men, and mainstays of their respective teams.

This game, which will take place in the Western gymnasium on January 16, will center around two men: Captain Max Reed, 6 foot 4 inch guard of the Hilltoppers, and lanky Chester Masterson, captain of the U. of L. squad, who towers some 6 feet 5 inches into the ozone. These boys will be fighting it out for the last time as college basketball players. Although they are not enemies in the true sense of the word, they will put forth the very best that they are capable of in an effort to settle their feud for good and for all. Big Max, who is a veritable stone wall on defense and a constant threat under the basket, will pit his talents against the brilliant and strategic floor game of the "Chatter" as Masterson is known to his teammates.

The rivalry began back in high school. The Chatter was a member of duPont Manual High School's team almost from the day he entered its doors. His tremendous height making him an outstanding prospect. Max, on the other hand, attended Louisville Male High School, a perennial rival of Manual's, and did not even go out for basketball. With the beginning of his third year in high school, Max moved to Okolona and made the basketball team there easily. The following year Okolona and Manual clashed for the first time and Max, remembering his hatred for the Crimson which he had gained in those two years at Male High, resolved to play the game of his career. That he did and more.

According to sports writers, Max completely out-played his opponent Masterson although his team was on the losing end of a 51-17 score. If my memory serves me right, Max garnered 13 points to Masterson's 8, at the same time guarding two or three players to help make up for the deficiency of his teammates.

Later when each matriculated in college, they continued their fight for varsity positions and each man was a regular in his sophomore year. Although Reed was made over into a guard while Masterson remained a center, the change of positions will in no way affect their little argument as they will each have plenty of chances against the other on defense.

So far, in the past two years, they have proved to be very equal in ability and fans can expect to see a fine contest between these boys. It is the sincere hope of your columnist that the best man comes out on top.

The members of Western's 1936 football team are to be congratulated on an excellent choice for their 1937 grid captain. At the annual football banquet, which was held recently, they chose big Clarence Caple, twice All-K. I. A. C. center to lead the destinies of the Red and Grey eleven in next season's campaign. Caple, who is a product of Coach Teddy Hornback at Ludlow High School, is all that a captain should be. Although not a colorful player, Caple's brilliant work has not gone unrecognized as evidenced by the fact that he has been chosen on the All-K. I. A. C. team for the past two years. It is quite a task to make that mythical All-State team when just a sophomore.

Alternate-Captain Joe Cook is also due congratulations. Playing under the terrific handicap of a broken hand for most of the season, Joe turned in some outstanding performances which earned him an All-K. I. A. C. berth at guard. Joe is an able leader and can be counted on to turn in some excellent games next season.

A rare treat is in store for you net fans during the first week in February. Two boys happen to attend the basketball game between College High and Jefferson County High on the former's floor. When two brothers match their wits and their respective teams, just what will happen? Coach Frank Lawrence's Jefferson County High team. It is likely to be a fast, close game and should be well worth watching.

Diddle Gets Talent From Frosh Squad

Saddler, Roland, Others Prove to be "Finds"

With another hard season facing him, and with the loss of three star players staring him in the face, Coach Edgar Allen Diddle again has surprised everyone, possibly including himself, by pulling out of a seemingly hopeless bag a team of real ability.

Losing players such as Brad Mutchler, whom Diddle proclaimed to be the best basketball player he had ever coached, Elmo Meacham, diminutive speedster, and Buford Garner, a Nick Denes prodigy, was enough to make most coaches give up. Not so with "Uncle Ed." He pulled a couple of rabbits out of the hat, really he mysteriously produced more than two. He plucked a sharpshooter from the freshman ranks of last year by the name of Harry Saddler, and Harry has been doing right well for himself. He learned to hit the basket on an outdoor court at Summershade, but he has found that they are just as easy to hit on the hardwood so he has been pacing the "Toppers in most of their games. Saturday night against Sewanee, he garnered 18 points and only played a little over half the game.

As Harry seems headed for a permanent berth on the Topper squad, other freshmen graduates seem to be headed in the same direction. Jesse Roland, one of Coach "Bear" Lawrence's boys from College High, is forcing himself in an effort to pifer a position. He is a tall, rangy lad, and fits well into a picture of "Red" McCrocklin, six foot six inch center, and Max Reed, six foot four inch guard. Those three can give any team plenty to worry over.

Bill Stemm also is a tall, lanky lad who will see plenty service of the varsity squad. He played at St. Xavier High in Louisville under the tutelage of Bob Schuman before entering Western.

The three boys have helped lots to increase the fans' confidence in the "Toppers. Another startling athlete seems due to do some more startling. He astounded everyone with his decided brilliance on the gridiron and appears ready to give plenty of surprises on the hardwood. He is J. C. Hatzel, who last year was just another football player with some but not unusual ability. This year he seems certain for a regular berth on Coach Anderson's '37 grid machine when it gets under way. He has been equally surprising on the floor. He is small, little over five feet eight, but has a swift pair of winged feet which he can really use. He is a result of Central City High School's patience, a boy taught to play the way Coach Taylor wants them to play. And that way is very good, because several of his boys have starred for Western in years past. He will bear watching this year.

Other members who are able and apt to land a regular job as a Hilltopper are Hardin Cherry, Burman Moulton, Red Rayburn, John McCreary, Ralph Dorsey, and others.

The old players, old because they have played for the Red and Grey before are Ralph Dudgeon, regular guard, Carl Lamar, alternate-Captain, Red McCrocklin, lanky center, and Max Reed, tall forward and captain of this new rejuvenated Hilltopper aggregation.

Apparently another K. I. A. C. championship is in the making.

HILLTOPPERS WIN OVER SEWANE

Teachers One of Smoothest Combinations Seen In Tennessee Town

The Sewanee basketball quintet lost its third game of the season bowing to Western Kentucky Teachers, 48-22, in a fast, offensive game, Saturday night.

Saddler, expert, marksmen of the visiting five, led the attack with six field goals and six foul for a total of 18 points.

The Teachers cut loose with a dazzling offensive at the opening whistle and ran up an 18-1 lead before the Tigers could get going.

Saddler, who played high school basketball on an outdoor court at Summershade, Ky., until last year, missed only two shots from the floor in the first half. He played only a short time in the second period.

The 400 fans present, including the Rt. Rev. Theodore Bratton, Episcopal bishop of Mississippi and chaplain of the University, went away proclaiming the visitors one of the smoothest combinations seen here in many years.

The Tigers made their only threat early in the second half when Shelton, veteran forward, led the attack to run the Sewanee total to 28 as against the Teachers' 28. That was the closest the "mountain" five came to overtaking the Kentuckians.

This rally was cut short when Shelton was ejected for exceeding the personal foul limit. He was followed out of the game a few minutes later by Luce, varsity guard.

Captain Reed, an all-S. I. A. A. football player, proved a smooth playing mate for the brilliant Saddler in the rout of the Sewanee quintet which previously had lost to Hixson and Emory and Henry University.

Coach Allen Lincoln, in an effort to get on the right side of the ledger, started Sugg, Kelsor, football end, at center, instead of the reliable Rupert Colmore, all-Southern Conference tackle who was shifted to guard, but the visitors had too much class in both offensive and defensive maneuvers for the Sewanee clan.

The summary:
Halftime score, Western Kentucky 28, Sewanee 8.

Four letter men, only two of whom were regulars last year, comprise the nucleus of the 1937 aggregation which, prior to the holidays, invaded the Louisville arena and won four of five games.

Teacher: "Parse the sentence, Tom married Jane."

Boy: "Tom's a noun, because he's the name of something; married's a conjunction, because it joins Tom to Jane; and Jan's a verb, because she governs the noun."

"It was terrible," said Mrs. Grogan. "There were thirty Swedes and one Irishman killed in that wreck."

"Ah, the poor man!" said Mrs. Murphy.
